I think there's very exciting spaces across the automation landscape from our ability to really accelerate the building of automations, being able to empower, really seeing some developments, to truly be able to explode that opportunity.

EDUARDO DIQUEZ:

Auxis has really been a leader in the intelligent automation space for 8 years focusing with the partnership with UiPath since its very early stages. We really saw UiPath as the leader in this space.

00:00:39 - 00:00:47

BILL WOODFORD:

And ultimately this is about us driving value for our clients, having a point of view helping to identify opportunities to deliver that value.

00:00:48 - 00:01:07

BILL WOODFORD:

We won the Foundational Partner of the Year Award, we're thrilled to have been recognized with that award. It's a testament to what we've done with this program, because the Foundational Award is really about driving value for clients and having a depth of expertise and delivering value through the UiPath platform and I think we've done a very effective job in both of those areas.

EDUARDO DIQUEZ:

I see that there's a lot of organizations really trying to scale their automation programs and really struggling to achieve that by either not having the right vision, the right strategy or having the right team that can enable them to really uncover the potential of automation within their organizations and I think having the right team that is really thinking about the business outcomes that automation can bring and really driving the vision that will align the organization behind a common goal of really driving impact, scalability, acceleration of business processes through automation is what has driven us to really support our customers and winning this award today which we're very proud of.

00:01:50 - 00:02:09

BILL WOODFORD:

So, with agentic automation we see a world of potential there and if you think about the progression of where we've been with RPA and then with AI skills, document understanding, communications minding, and others there's been a progression and I think the next wave that we'll have with agentic will be really interesting opportunities that we can uncover.

EDUARDO DIQUEZ:

I think there's very exciting spaces across the automation landscape from our ability to really accelerate the building of automations, being able to empower, really seeing some developments, to truly be able to explode that opportunity but to be able to accelerate and make it almost seamless for people to use natural language to really drive automation across the organization is very exciting. Being able to just have self-healing automations in the future by using Agentic

Automation, being able to identify where CH processes changes happen and being able to accelerate our ability to just put it automations back in productions faster will explode the benefit of automation across organizations that have been skeptical or that have had some hesitation about moving forward with automation in the past.
