Grant Thornton

What Could SEC Filer Status Changes Mean for Your Organization?

Transcript

00:00:00 - 00:00:12

Most of the conversation around the SEC's proposed filer-status amendments has focused on what the rules might change. But the bigger question is: What could those changes mean for your organization?

00:00:13 - 00:00:29

Depending on your circumstances, the proposal could affect reporting requirements, internal controls, governance considerations, and future planning, while also creating opportunities for relief or simplification.

00:00:30 - 00:00:45

And while the rulemaking process continues to evolve, many organizations are already evaluating the potential impacts and opportunities, as well as the decisions they may need to make if the proposal moves forward.

00:00:46 - 00:00:51

The organizations getting ahead today are asking important questions:

00:00:52 - 00:01:09

Could our filer status change? What areas of the business could be affected? Are management and governance stakeholders aligned on the implications? Where could the proposed changes create opportunities for relief or simplification?

00:01:10 - 00:01:24

The key isn't simply understanding what could change. It's understanding what those changes could mean for your business, including where they could create opportunities for relief or simplification.

00:01:25 - 00:01:44

Backed by Grant Thornton's audit and SEC reporting experience, and supported by leading technology, we help organizations evaluate the potential implications, identify both risks and opportunities, and determine where to focus as the rulemaking process evolves.

00:01:45 - 00:01:55

Because making informed decisions starts with understanding what could change, what it could mean for your organization and where you may need to act.

00:01:56 - 00:02:10

Explore our SEC filer status resources to better understand how these proposed changes could affect your organization, the potential implications, and the questions you should be asking now.

©2026 Grant Thornton Advisors LLC | All rights reserved